

All The 1975 Album. The 1975 [Paperback] by Nick Hasted (Publisher) by The 75. Isbn0713609076 The 1975 album, Notes on a Conditional Form, is due to be released on the 14th of December and we can exclusively reveal what we've been working on. The EP is titled 'Destroyer' and features the single 'Like I Would'. It is named after a lyric from the track and the track has a science fiction feel to it with a pulsing dance floor rhythm. The track itself is a true dancefloor banger with vocal additions from Iggy Pop. What a pleasure to listen to what is clearly a promising start from The 1975. Listen to the single below, and be sure to get your copy of 'Notes on a Conditional Form', from the UK's acclaimed and thrilling band, as soon as it's released. Melbourne's own Don Broco has been a huge sensation over the past 12 months. Since the release of his 2012 debut album Bring It On, Broco's reputation has only grown, which is evidenced by his album securing four nominations at the 2018 ARIA Awards. Now Broco is returning with The Tenement, a collection of 10 songs that are sure to impress. With The Tenement, Broco delivers one of his best albums to date. The record features the hit single 'What Do You Know' and the song has been getting huge radio play. The music video for the track is currently airing on Triple J. 'What Do You Know' is about having no choice but to 'leave your preconceptions at the door' and embracing the unknown. The vocals on the track come from Mona D. The song mixes piano melodies, drums and a super pop feel to create a great listening experience. Broco said of the song, "I wanted to write a song that left no room for preconceptions, that you had to be open minded and ready to discover yourself". "'What Do You Know' is a song about embracing the unknown and the chaos that can create, but always having the ability to be inspired by it." 'What Do You Know' is a track that Broco wrote himself, and one of the reasons he chose it to be the lead single is because it is a totally different direction than what he's ever written. "I felt like I
