Thought File Ontario Liberals have been told to send a cabinet minister to an inquiry into how the province botched plans to reduce the number of patients receiving electroconvulsive therapy (ECT) as part of its austerity measures, newly released emails show. In the documents, obtained by the Ontario Provincial Police under a Freedom of Information request, bureaucrats from Premier Kathleen Wynne's office began drafting a response to the inquiry minutes after receiving a note from a cabinet minister. The note, obtained by the Toronto Sun, said the "Minister of Health is fully supporting the call for an ECT inquiry." The minister's name was redacted, but the OPP confirmed to CBC News it was David Caplan, who works in Wynne's office. The note was sent at 4:38 p.m. on Feb. 13, the day before Wynne announced the provincial government would undertake a review of the use of ECT in Ontario. The documents are from Feb. 14, the day after Wynne announced the review, and include an email from Thomas Di Muzio, then the president of the Ontario Psychiatric Association, to Wardy McGuire, the president of the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police. Di Muzio wrote that Wynne had informed him the day before that the government would launch the inquiry. Di Muzio later co-wrote a letter to the premier on behalf of the association, which also said Wynne needed to take immediate action. "As this inquiry is to review procedures and practices, it is incumbent on government to do so," Di Muzio wrote. Di Muzio added that

"doctors and the public are not having confidence in the lack of transparency and accountability of the government." In a statement to the Toronto Sun, Premier Kathleen Wynne said she has confidence in Ontario's physicians, their leadership and the system in which they practice. (Canadian Press/Adrian Wyld) In a statement emailed to CBC News, Premier Kathleen Wynne said she had confidence in Ontario's physicians, their leadership and the system in which they practice. "These are our doctors," Wynne said. "Their sense of trust in the system is fundamental to the practice of medicine and to the delivery of essential services. As I
