Logitrace V14 Crack Et Serial.515The present invention relates to a technology for enhancing the feature accuracy of an optical character recognition apparatus in the input operation of a handwritten character. In the optical character recognition apparatus, an optical character recognition result is formed on the basis of a difference between a handwritten character string input to a character input portion and the corresponding standard character string. In this case, generally, as the number of stroke points in the handwritten character string input to the character input portion increases, the number of standards and the number of kinds of the standard character strings tend to increase.

However, when the number of stroke points in the handwritten character string increases, the influence of an affine transformation operation performed to compensate the deviation between the shape of the handwritten character and the standard character becomes large. That is, when an optical character recognition apparatus recognizes a handwritten character, a coordinate value obtained from a distance from the handwritten character to a standard character is generally affine-transformed on the basis of a predetermined affine transformation operation. At this time, a parameter representing a degree of influence of the affine transformation operation varies in accordance with the number of stroke points in the handwritten character. Therefore, in the case of recognizing a handwritten character, it is preferable that the number of stroke points in the handwritten character input to the character input portion is fixed. However, the number of stroke points is generally determined on the basis 2d92ce491b
