Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a high-pressure gaseous discharge lamp, more particularly to a structure for sealing an electrode tube and a phosphor material of the lamp. 2. Description of the Related Art High-pressure gaseous discharge lamps are widely used for signal lamps, spotlight lamps, and the like, because they are capable of high luminance with compact size. Recently, a high-pressure gaseous discharge lamp using a luminescent material capable of emitting blue light is also widely used for a display device, a lighting device, and the like, due to its wide view angle. Such a high-pressure gaseous discharge lamp has a quartz glass electrode tube, and a phosphor layer formed on the inner surface of the electrode tube. The electrode tube has a hollow cylindrical shape, and an electric conductor such as a tungsten (W) wire is provided at the center of the inside of the electrode tube. The phosphor layer includes a mixture of a phosphor material and a binder. The phosphor layer is formed by a method in which the phosphor material and the binder are first mixed in an organic solvent, and then the mixture is applied to the inside of the electrode tube. When the electrode tube is manufactured by the above method, the tungsten wire is placed in the electrode tube, and the electrode
