A retrospective analysis was performed in 56 patients with thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura (TTP) to determine the frequency of documented or probable hereditary platelet disorders (HPD). Thirty-five of 56 patients (64%) had at least one known platelet disorder; the diagnosis was established by demonstration of absent platelet aggregation (22%), decreased platelet count (12%), or increased platelet turnover (9%). There was a significant positive association between having a platelet disorder and having a positive family history for TTP (p less than 0.05). HPD should be considered in patients with TTP.diff --git a/code/core/Mage/Admin/Model/Observer.php b/code/core/Mage/Admin/Model/Observer.php index 0a1ce87..32bf44d 100644 --- a/ 2d92ce491b
