Category:Works about pederastyQ: What is the best approach to backing up an Oracle 11g database? I want to restore a database on a new server. This new server will have a new hardware setup and I want to be able to restore a database backup from the same version of the database server. What is the best way to ensure the backup is working? I want to take a "copy" backup that is actually a mirror of the database. However, I want to do this without needing to have physical access to the database server. Is there a way of dumping the schema (including users and tables) and then restoring into another schema? A: Oracle Database 10.2.0.4 Enterprise Edition provides support for Oracle Flashback Database. As of that version, you can do backups and restores by using database dumps. There is no need for using physical dumps, and the best thing is that it can be applied to other platforms (Linux, UNIX, OSX, Windows etc.). This is a general reference about Oracle Database DDL. The bottom line is that you will need to load the dump file into the new server using the "load dump file" tool in the dbca tool in Oracle Database. As a general note, backups are not a one-time operation. If you take the full database backup every night, and then run it weekly, it will work for long enough
