Free is a screensaver that makes you look at screensavers from a very unique perspective. It is obvious that your old screensaver program is clunky and inefficient, but what you don't realise is that it was put together by committee and may have dependencies on other software, which are impossible to remove. In addition, it may have been paid for by a venture capital firm and deployed to you at an exorbitant price to make their shareholders feel good, and it has probably been downloaded by about a million people before you, which is why people have written lazy software to try to add all the features that this one has, and it's really only you who might be able to notice them. =====
Somewhere in a unknown area of Cosmos, multicoloured geometrical forms curve and play with the light. It seems simple (and it is!), but this screensaver fulfills perfectly its two principal functions: ☐ To move enough pixels to prevent unaesthetic marks from appearing on your screen; ☐ To trap any potential spectator, who will then stare at the pretty colors instead of doing whatever task he has to do. The rhythmic oscillations of the colored loops which tie and untie on the stary background will quickly plunge you in an hypnotic transe. Innovative algorithm: ===== Four simple but powerful rules govern "Abstract Dance Screensaver": ☐ The wave translates the 3D space into the 2D screen. ☐ The velocity of the wave is directly proportional to the distance from its source. ☐ This source oscillates infinitely, revealing a particular space. ☐ The rainbow of colors and the speed at which these colors pass "under" each other is also directly proportional to the distance from the source. A sufficiently powerful graphics card may seem mandatory for this screensaver, but in fact is not. Its working relies on the fact that a GPU is actually capable of performing massively parallel calculations. The algorithm is thus optimized for the GPU only, and no particular CPU is required.
