Thoughts from an optimistic, optimistic global conservationist Main menu Post navigation Meet the Winners The proposals that have been submitted for Kew's Green Plans 2017: an ambitious programme of plant conservation across the world were judged by an expert panel of botanists and conservation experts. The winners of the Awards for Excellence were announced at an event held at Kew's Millennium Seed Bank on 8th July. The winners were selected from the 132 proposals from all over the world received by our international Kew's Award for Excellence programme. The winners all come from an important and supportive group of countries and are spread across continents. The green plans would deliver a range of conservation-related and sustainable actions, which would collectively benefit plants. A key part of the awards process was to provide the opportunity for different groups of stakeholders, representing a wide variety of countries and situations, to provide their personal viewpoints to our experts. Such a process gave weight to the proposals that had received the highest number of nominations.Nurses' attitudes toward and provision of care to women at different stages of pregnancy. Attitudes of forty-one nurses toward care for women throughout pregnancy were measured by using the Kardex-5 Scale, and the nurses' management of three physiological variables was also assessed. Scores related to both attitudes toward and provision of care to women throughout pregnancy were highly significant for both the total sample and the nurses who have had children. The findings indicated that most nurses possessed pro-natal attitudes and would care for the mother and infant as if these were their own children. The nurses were found to be significantly more effective managers than were doctors in three of the four specialties. which show the origin of these fields is evident: the resulting field is determined from the time-dependent solution to the mode equation $$\omega_{lm}(t)=\omega_{lm}^0\,{\rm e}^{ -i\omega_{lm}^0 t} +\int_0^t dt'\,\dot{\omega}_{lm}(t')\,{\rm e}^{ -i\omega_{lm}(t') t'}\,.$$ The ansatz $A_l(t)=A_l^0\,{\rm e}^{ -i\omega_{lm}^0 t}$ leads to $$\label{eq:A}

Natalie Portman's Top 5 Movies of Summer Natalie Portman and director Darren Aronofsky — seen here when they recently finished the Natalie's Here Comes Mister Aronofsky documentary — will co-star in the upcoming sci-fi thriller Black Swan. Pit: The Pit Is Closed Darren Aronofsky is known for the oddball marketing campaigns, but his latest, the Zombie Movie Event, had something almost startling for one of Hollywood's most disciplined filmmakers. In the seven months between his latest film, The Wrestler, and his next, Aronofsky decided to shoot one completely ad-libbed. The result, Left Behind, a boxing drama starring Mickey Rourke, opened to mixed reviews and disappointed art - n 2007, after spending eight years on a film that eventually became The Wrestler. "The thing I'm really proud of about it is that I didn't know if it was ever going to be released," Aronofsky told the New Yorker last year, "and we shot it completely without any idea if it was going to be released." The ad-libbed shots from a script that Aronofsky had written, along with three or four actors of his own choosing, are meant to hold the tension of The Wrestler and its characters. Shh! Jeremy Renner, star of two of the best films of 2010, takes a bit of time to find his way as a leading man, and it's understandable why. As a star in making the world forget that he was one in Kill Bill, it's the rare film that actually stars him. Until now, that is. Until Kill Bill: Volume 2. Our review: The first two parts have been dynamite, but the third sadly lacks the suspense that previous volumes did. Still, great fights, great characters and, above all, many many bloodsucking possibilities await movie fans. The Break-Up There's a reason why Natalie Portman was the cover star of Vanity Fair's September issue. She may seem like a woman who holds nothing back in terms of her interviews, but when it comes to The Break-Up, she's actually revealing the most private details of her personal life. Which is also the film's best
