Those who are suffering from this affliction can understand them, but the greedy and corrupt have no compassion for the person they wronged and all they can think about is how much they can get out of it. They can think of nothing else. They go over the same ground again and again. For this reason, the precious one who understands with the wisdom of the wise will be able to understand a person with the knowledge of a person who has no compassion for a person. His wisdom is infinite, and it never falters. He remains constant and keeps on pondering over it all the time, never letting it go. The wise say the highest form of wisdom is to see through ignorance. The Buddha said that this was a form of the highest wisdom, to see through a lie. The same applies in worldly matters. The person who is able to see through the mind of the other person is able to understand the foolishness of that person. He doesn't see him as a victim who is bearing the pain of a blow. He doesn't see him as someone who has the ability to hurt him. Instead, he sees him as someone who wants to have his friend come back into the world. It is the same with the story of the highest kindness. The Buddha said that a person who has been afflicted in this way should not think that he is someone who has the ability to afflict him, but he should think that he wants to protect him. If that person thinks like this, then he can be of great benefit to that person. But if he sees him as someone who has the ability to hurt him, he is going to treat him like the garbage he is, someone who cannot be helped. He will put him away, thinking that he cannot be helped. He will not waste the time he would spend trying to help him. The person who can understand and think in this way is able to give tremendous benefit to the person who has been afflicted
