A great starting point for Photoshop is the step-by-step tutorial here: www.sitepoint.com/photoshop. Here are some of Photoshop's most popular features and how they work. For an overview of Photoshop, see Chapter 1. If you want more information on a feature that you find in a tutorial or the manual, go to Chapter 5.

Selections The Selection tool allows you to highlight areas of an image and manipulate them on a separate layer. The tool has many variations and is a great tool for making complex selections. You can control the selection by clicking and dragging to create a bounding box around a specific area, and then dragging that box to increase or decrease the selected area. You can also use the brush or eraser to remove parts of the selection. After you select a section of an image, you can then make changes such as change its color, brightness, and contrast. You can also use the Blend mode to mix the selected area with other areas of the image. You can use the Spot Healing Brush to clean up incorrectly selected areas. The Spot Healing Brush erases a small amount of the material around the incorrect selection and automatically fills in the area with the correct material. The Lasso tool is a versatile tool that you use to draw freehand around a specific area of an image. When you use the Lasso tool, you're creating a selection with the bounding box of the selected area. You can also use the Lasso tool to create a selection by clicking, dragging, and releasing, where you then press and hold the Ctrl key while clicking. This creates an automatic selection.

Blending modes Blend modes allow you to automatically adjust the opacity and blending of two layers and is a great way to combine images or control the look of an image with a gradient. You can use the default blend mode to copy or multiply two layers together, but there are many other blend modes available. You can create your own blend modes by clicking the Blending Options button in the Layers panel and choosing a blend mode. You can access the Blending Options in most programs that contain layers by going to the Layer Options (or Properties) panel, and then clicking the Blending drop-down menu in the lower-right corner.

Using Adjustments Adjustments are features that allow you to control the color, brightness, and contrast of your image. They enable you to make significant changes to an image de casos nuevos que se están presentando, y que por ello es el momento de examinar también los problemas relacionados con la seguridad de los jugadores de esos estadios. P. ¿Se ha pensado en poner una cuota de la sociedad o de la Unión Europea para que se pueda hacer ese trabajo? R. Desde el punto de vista de la Unión Europea, por una parte, se se ve obligada a aplicar el principio de que tiene que estar presente un espacio público neutral e imparcial de desarrollo e investigación. Por otra parte, como dice el teórico británico Robin Hay, dice que en un sistema de reparto en el que a una empresa le dan una propiedad de un solo usuario, lo suyo es que esa empresa sea muy buena, o sea, nos pone en una posición muy favorita. P. ¿Es posible que el canadiense se dedique al fútbol desde sus oficinas donde se juega al golf y al tenis cuando se trate de golpes de los jugadores? R. No, en absoluto. Son dos cosas muy distintas. Hay una serie de categorías que son competencias de la Unión Europea. Que toda la información sea centralizada no implica la centralización en un solo país. Esa es una decisión que tomaría cada institución, por ejemplo, el Financial Times, que es una publicación de impresiones, dedicada a la política, etc. P. No se puede tener en cuenta al jugador como persona, y no se debe tratar de condenar a nadie. Solo se puede hablar sobre esas cosas desde un punto de vista penal. R. No, no, no. En el caso del fútbol los del

Jake Tapper on the Sunday presidential debate: 'This is time for TV legends' Sunday's first debate between Democrat Hillary Clinton and Republican Donald Trump was historic. It will be the first time in history that a network TV anchor has moderated a presidential debate. And it will be the first time in history that a political debate is being moderated by a TV anchor. The debate was a model of journalistic professionalism, and the anchors who hosted it -- including Tapper -- were as relaxed as judges at a Miss America pageant. In the hallways, these anchors and lawyers don't compete. They collaborate. Here are the rules they broke, courtesy of Tapper, host of "State of the Union" on CNN: Ruling out all the 'right' questions "I think all of us agreed that we would simply not allow either party or candidate to answer a question by saying, 'Let me pick up on that.'" Question time from the floor was handled by three question givers, each representing a network, plus one from Facebook, to make six total question givers. Donald Trump declined every question that asked him to detail his policy plans, but he did address one question on climate change. Hillary Clinton skipped the question. Questioning on everything but the weather "In tonight's debate, I think, we all agreed that we'd allow the candidates to talk about the issues that are of concern to the American public. The reason we did is that the people in the United States have a lot of concerns. "And we didn't want to say to voters: 'All right, we're going to focus on issues related to the weather for the next 90 minutes.'" When the candidates did get around to issues, they were asked about everything but the issues, including the by-now-standard questions about Trump's hair and Clinton's email practices. Delegates get the honeymoon "We are asking the candidates to cut through the harsh glare of the campaign spotlight to speak to us for just a few minutes -- not to catch up on a day's schedule, but to respond to a set of questions that are part of our shared journey to the White House. "We agreed that the candidates would each get a chance to speak in one-minute round.
