Powered by motion capture technology, “HyperMotion” is the most advanced and sophisticated player intelligence system in the FIFA franchise. Because it collects data from 22 real-life players in a match, this gives the player-player animation system more information to work with. Players’ physical movements now have an increased fidelity, and more details are now visible on the pitch, such as the positioning of opponents, and players’ physical behaviors during all actions. Fans can watch several gameplay previews in FIFA 22’s Manual Mode that showcase the changes to in-game player reactions. Moreover, in the Sliding Difficulty setting (accessed through the FIFA 22 Difficulty menu), the gameplay-driven cut-scenes and in-game cinematics will be more tied to action on the pitch. New animations in defensive and offensive situations will also occur more frequently. Furthermore, FIFA 22 introduces the Post-Match Analysis, which allows players to review and replay camera angles in a full match to see the match as if their coach is standing in front of them in real time. As with the Manual mode, the camera will move to the players, providing further insight as to how the team is performing. HyperMotion Technology is also the foundation for the Information mode, which allows players to track a single individual in the game as they did in FIFA 21, by accessing their Stats menu. Players can also take a peek at match-specific stats, such as passing and shooting accuracy. So you can be able to see every detail of that player’s performance. FIFA 22 is compatible with the Xbox One X, and will run at 1080p and 60fps for all gameplay. It is also compatible with the Xbox One X Enhanced, and will give players the best graphical experience possible on the X One X hardware. Users of the X will have access to improved lighting and textures on the pitch, plus added post-processing effects. Exclusive to the Xbox One X, the FIFA 22 Beta program will offer new players the chance to experience what’s new in the game by accessing the pitchside view in-game.

More details on this Beta program will be available nearer the release date. Features “HyperMotion” Expected Player AI: Players now react to situations faster than in the past, giving players a better understanding of the game’s physics. Opponents now predict the ball’s movement and position more accurately,
