CAMBRIDGE, Mass. -- Trying to get into Harvard College is never easy, but Yale's assistant dean of admissions says the Ivy League institution is becoming more selective than it used to be. Yale has seen a decline in the number of applicants from African-Americans and Hispanics. Michael Van Hechting says he's not sure whether that is a result of affirmative action or not. "I think it is a little bit of both. I think there is a learning process in terms of really getting to know the diversity that we have at Yale now. But I would say we are still very selective," said Van

Hechting. In admissions in the past, Van Hechting admits it's difficult to provide precise data on how many applicants were denied admission. But he says the
