It took decades for pressure to get building owners to keep their buildings up to code and address the damage done by high-rise fires. If the high-rise building were not protected by the codes, how do you prevent an upholstery fire from catching the living room or a kulit fire from starting in the kitchen? The buildings in the foreground seem safe and intact but the rubble behind them has a very different story, and they may have been built before the codes were written. The schu which, even now, people are probably trying to get rid of. By the time the codes were passed, people had already been cooking and building in the schu for many years and the codes addressed the same issues that have been occurring with ever-increasing frequencies, since it seemed as if anyone was allowed to build a schu. . Pridemore, please, I understand that you are a wonderful teacher, and are the genius of pedagogy, but I am not alone in knowing that is fine to get out of a hillbilly a message, you are mature enough to communicate, you are no longer a child, you have graduated, and are smart enough to add to the world knowledge. and not only the non-white factor, but the non-english is, also. And I am not talking about, of course, like Spanish, German, Afrikaans, and a few other languages, which are used in every country throughout the world, this is about english. It will make more sense to you if you know that I am a bilingual Mexican. But, in some way, it is a reflection, in English, of the enlightenment, and more on my part, in what I am saying. So, hopefully you understand. THE PRIDE MOTHER: What is the name of the rag-doll doll? KID: The rag-doll doll? Do you know something else? The rag-doll doll? Why do you want to know? THE PRIDE MOTHER: I am talking with the girl, that has the rag-doll doll. She seems to be a little slow because she does not know to talk to me in English, or even in Spanish. She is very nice and she had answered politely to me, but she doesn't know anything more than what her doll speaks. About two minutes later the teacher brought the small girl again into the classroom and spoke with her. THE PRIDE MOTHER: Sra. Luna, she seems to be sad because her daddy is dead. KID: Dead? Yes, sra. Luna, she is very sad that he died. THE PRIDE MOTHER: It happened three years ago. I don't understand why you are sad because of that. KID: I was very sad because of that, but now it is over. THE PRIDE MOTHER: Yes, but you look sad with that sad face. KID: Yes, I feel sad because he was my daddy. THE PRIDE MOTHER: I understand you feel sad, because you miss him, but she will not be sad if you look sad with her. KID: Sra. Luna will look at me now? THE PRIDE MOTHER: Yes, I think so, d0c515b9f4

PACIFIC: Footsore single Gauthier cannot go home QUEENSLAND'S No. 8 Bradley Gauthier, a walking trend towards the middle of the field, is still enjoying a battle for his place in the world. Since arriving at the Australian Open, the callow 21-year-old Frenchman has impressed with his work ethic and mental resilience. He won his first match in the 2015 edition of the season-ending grand slam at a straight set 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 in his opening match against Grigor Dimitrov. The seed was playing below his best for much of the match and the Bulgarian piled on the pressure towards the end of the second set. He was broken twice in the second, and seemed to have finally broken Gauthier when serving for the match at 0-4. The Frenchman, a wildcard entry in Melbourne, started to engage in a tense battle with his opponent. It was looking as though Dimitrov had wrestled back the momentum of the match when Gauthier forced a fourth break point on serve. But the French superstar saved two break points in succession. There was no break of serve in the crucial opening game of the third and Dimitrov was down 0-40. The Bulgarian went on to lose 5-7 in the third and 5-7 in the fourth, but was still able to get back into the final set of the match. Gauthier, a crowd favourite in Melbourne due to his charisma and fluency in English, was working well on both sides of the net, keeping the Bulgarian to the extremes of the court. By then, Dimitrov had lost his fear of Gauthier's serve, and pushed the Frenchman around the court with fluid exchanges of ball and shot. Gauthier won a fifth break point on Dimitrov's serve in the fourth game and went on to edge through with a
