Step 2 Click on the "File" button.

Step 3 Click on the "File" dropdown menu.

Step 4 Click on the "Open Document" button. Photoshop Express opens.

Step 5 In the lower half of the left side of Photoshop Express, click on the word "Open." A pop-up screen will appear.

Step 6 Select the.psd file, and click on the "Open" button.

Step 7 Click on the "Close" button.

Step 8 Photoshop Express displays the original image and the Photoshop file simultaneously. There are also a few tab controls on the top right that you can use to change the size of the window to 100%, 150%, or 200% of the original image.

Step 9 To edit your image, you will use the Layers window located at the bottom of Photoshop Express. Photoshop Express displays the original image and the Photoshop file simultaneously. There are also a few tab controls on the top right that you can use to change the size of the window to 100%, 150%, or 200% of the original image. The Layers window contains three tabs:

- The Layers panel.
- The Paths panel.
- The Adjustment panel.

Step 10 Use the Layers window to bring up the layers of your original image. Each layer becomes a panel that can be placed over the other to create various effects. Layers are not the same as resolution or color depth of an image; each layer actually has a resolution and color depth of its own. One of the first things you will probably want to do with Photoshop Express is to do a quick edit of your image. Use the controls at the top of the Layers panel to select the Background layer. After clicking on the layer, Photoshop Express will make the background transparent. If you are going to make a lot of changes to your image, you will probably want to create a new layer

What's New In?

Geoffrey Brown of the New South Wales government's science and research advisory body was understood to have said on Tuesday that a proposed $1.4 billion upgrade of the state's major power network would not be required if the government cancelled the contract to build it. Concerns were raised last week by the energy and environment department about the risk of contaminated sediment from the project threatening water supplies in the town of Narrabri and the local network. A NSW government science and research advisory board member briefed the opposition, but did not name the adviser, at a meeting in Sydney on Tuesday. "There is no need for the Narrabri project," he reportedly said. "The science's all there." The anti-nuclear campaigners have long contended that the NSW government has ignored scientific advice not to proceed with the $1.4 billion project, a development that has upset some cabinet colleagues who are concerned about its potential impact on NSW's environment and locals, who rely on the supply of water from the Narrabri Pipeline for irrigation. The NSW opposition leader, Michael Daley, said the government was "wrong to go ahead with the Narrabri project". "The NSW government continues to ignore the advice of its own science and research advisory body," he said. "Given the urgent need for our farmers to have a reliable supply of fresh water, it's vital that they are given the answers they deserve." A large amount of hazardous material is expected to be used in the project, including large amounts of uranium, iron and manganese, none of which have been proven safe for human health. The project is expected to use 1.6 million tonnes of earth, between 20 and 50 million tonnes of concrete and 15 cubic kilometres of water. Significantly, the government's own assessment of the potential impact of the project on the local community was that it could cause 5,000 onshore and offshore deaths and 2,000 cases of cancer.
