some groups, and how they may be tracking us. We have also released our plans for this year's Electronic Frontiers Australia conference and the World Forum against Internet Censorship, plus we have details on the Coalition of Civil Liberties and Bodies Wider Than Borders project, which will be at EFA this year. There is also information about the launch of the Global Network Against Police and Militarism. In addition, we have details of the IIF, the International Information Security Conference, which will be hosted by the Australian Information Security Forum, and details of the 10th Anniversary Electronic Frontiers Australia conference, the Australian Book News Industry Conference, and the Australian Peace and Conflict Studies Association conference. We also have details of a number of international conferences. As a final note, there are some changes to our service providers for the new year. DNS servers on the IPv6 /64 block will be provided by JustDNS. They have been providing us service since November last year and have paid our ISP provider for that address space. Their prices are a little better than our last provider, but their prices come with a number of extra charges, so it is still cheaper than the charges from our last ISP provider. So, we've survived Christmas with continued service, but it is getting to be time to say goodbye to the ISP and start moving to the DNS servers provided by JustDNS. If you have any questions about these changes, please contact me. We'll also be shutting down the other sites before this DNS change occurs, so it is time to let other parties know of this change in service. As a final note, I'll be moving to a new ISP, but their new service is to be officially launched in September this year. Monday, December 22, 2012 The final newsletter of 2012 will discuss some of our main activities and what is planned for the next year, as well as what we are working on. We have had a busy year. We have had conferences, we have run workshops, we have run online courses, we have done presentations, and we have run training sessions. We have collaborated with other groups and individuals, and we have taken part in community activities. I'm planning for EFA, which has a theme on 'net governance', and I am also planning for the Australia Day Council of Civil Liberties conference, which will discuss the topic of Internet governance. It has been a busy year, but we have also had a few problems,

Q: Accessing local variable in if-statement I am writing an encoding program and I have a select statement as part of the program. I want to access the values of a variable that has been declared locally within the if-statement. I tried doing this: int main() { char option; int length = 1; char file[80]; int read = 1; printf("Enter option: "); scanf("%c", &option); if (option == "0" || option == "1" || option == "2") { printf("Type the filename you are encoding to."); scanf("%s", file); if (read == 1) { for (;;) { file = fgets(file, 80, stdin); if (fgetc(file) == EOF) break; } for (length = 0; length
