Bitwa Pod Wiedniem Film 12

i had a pretty good idea of what the film would be, but when i started to watch the film, i saw it was very different. the young soldiers are not boys of course. they have all suffered terrible things, but that was not the story. the film was about them going through hell and then getting home safely. it was a real delight for me to see that the story that i had imagined and the story the director had conceived was totally different. i thought that the story of the film was a big achievement. i won't say that the story of the film is best story of all time, but for me it was a very good story. it is not about 'good' and 'bad' and 'hero' and 'villain' and 'epic'. it is about the human condition and about individuality and the struggle for survival. waived (a gesture meaning 'accepted') at the 66th venice international film festival in 2012. it was submitted in competition for the 2012 academy awards for best foreign language film. it was also submitted in competition for the 2013 academy awards for best foreign language film. it was eventually not nominated for the 2013 academy awards for best foreign language film. "the film is based on the novel pan woodyjowski by henryk sienkiewicz. it tells a story about polish colonel, fighting for the republic on the southern border in ukraine. at the same time it depicts interesting episode of deluge." the film went on a lot of screenings at warsaw film festival, and received awards and decorations of many other film festivals. the main film award is the "vilnius grand prix" at the kinoteka film festival. 5ec8ef588b
